

R&D SCIENTIST

LOCATION: FUGLEBJERG, DENMARK

Are you a skilled professional eager to lead innovative projects in a cutting-edge cleantech company?

Clean Matter seeks a dedicated R&D Scientist to join our team offering you a unique opportunity to impact sustainable technology.

Additional Information:

- Occasional travel to Europe.
- Valid driving license.

Application Process:

Send your resume and cover letter to Head of People & Culture, Tina Kepka, by June 30th. E-mail: contact@clean-matter.com. We look forward to receiving your application.

For more information about the job, pls. contact us on +45 5353 1212.

Key Responsibilities:

- Lead technical development projects.
- Participate in developing our R&D department structure.
- Design and conduct experiments to develop new processes or improve existing ones.
- Analyze data, interpret results, and draw conclusions.

Requirements:

- Educational background in, chemical engineering, process technology or related disciplines.
- You have some experience with chemical processes.
- Fluent in English and Danish.
- Knowledge of chemical industrial processes and project work.
- Naturally curious about new technologies and developments.
- Showing initiative and willing to execute independently.
- Ability to balance multiple tasks and thrive in a dynamic environment.
- Flexible, independent, team-oriented, and a good communicator.

Desired Competencies:

- Experience with process development or research in pilot scale.
- Problem-solving skills and attention to detail.
- Ability to collaborate effectively with engineers and scientists both internally and externally.